Student's death stuns the NMSU community

Police say drugs may have been involved in the death of NMSU mechanical engineering major Eric Morris

By Cassandra Romero & Jessica Cervantes | Editor-in-Chief & Staff Writer

A New Mexico State University student was found unconscious on campus Saturday around 7 a.m. where he was taken to the hospital and later died, according to police.

NMSU police are currently investigating the death of Eric Morris, 23, a mechanical engineering major, who was found near the intersection of Stewart Street and Knox Street with severe head and torso injuries.

Police initially suspected the death was caused by a hit-and-run, however, Monday afternoon, NMSU Police Chief Jaime Chavez announced Morris was most likely killed after jumping 27-feet from a barn on campus while high on drugs.

Two students found Morris near a curb without shoes or socks.

According to police barefoot footprints were found on top of a nearby bull barn on campus. Police also say initial autopsy reports show the presence of cocaine, angel dust and THC, the active compound in marijuana, in Morris' system.

"We would like our students, faculty and staff to understand that this terrible incident does not appear to be the result of a traffic crash nor foul play," said NMSU Deputy Police Chief Stephen Lopez in an e-mail to NMSU and DACC campuses. "While the investigation remains ongoing, evidence indicates this was an accidental fall possibly related to drug use."

Susan McEnnerney, a hotel, restaurant, and tourism management major, and friend of Morris said the 23-year-old was a happy college student.

"He was an incredibly happy and cheerful person who loved to have a good time, and always had a smile on his face." said McEnnerney. "He will be missed."

Anyone with information about the case is asked to call NMSU Police at (575)-646-3311.

Mariachi Conference

Award-winning conference held Nov. 9-13

By Allison Duarte | Staff Writer

The 18th annual Las Cruces International Mariachi Conference is making its way to the New Mexico State University Pan American Center Nov.9-13 for a four-day event, full of learning and excitement.

The main show will be on Saturday, Nov. 12, with Vikki Carr headlining along with Mariachi Sol de Mexico de Jose Hernandez. Also in the lineup is fan favorite, Mariachi Cobre from Walt Disney World in Orlando Fl.

This year the Spectacular Concert will be celebrating Mariachi Cobres 40th anniversary.

The event concludes with the mariachi mass on Sunday, Nov.13, which features Mariachi Cobre, who is playing all liturgical music. This mass is presided over by Bishop Ricardo Ramirez, as a sacred and non-denominational

Parking spaces in front of Barnes & Noble bookstore set aside from general student parking on campus. By Anthony Ruff/ theRound Up

COMMENTARY

Parking bias on campus

By Gabriella Ferrari | Managing Editor

Several major parking projects on campus have limited the number of parking spaces, to the complaints of many students.

NMSU has an estimated 16,000 parking spaces available but only approximately 6,500 vehicles are on campus on the busiest days of the week, according to a recent survey.

Watkins said in an interview with the Merge there are plenty of spaces, "the issue is that they are not always convenient."

Commuter students lost an entire parking lot to the Taj Mahal that is Barnes and Noble.

With a decrease in "convenient" parking it is understandable to increase monitoring of parking usage, but the obvious partiality toward Barnes and Noble is extreme.

Last week I came to campus to drop something off and planned to spend the rest of my afternoon studying with a pumpkin spice latte in Barnes and Noble.

However, upon my exit, I found a parking citation on my car as it sat in one of their free two-hour parking spots. It cites an officer watched me park and walk away from the bookstore.

So had I decided to get my drink before taking care of other matters, I wouldn't have received a citation at all. This is a deterrent to potential customers. Needless to say next time I want a pumpkin spice latte, I will go across the street to the actual Starbucks.

Additionally, it was an NMSU parking officer that issued my citation. Parking officials is continuously monitoring the 78 parking spots in front of the bookstore- a private business.

Assuming one official is paid basic minimum wage, monitoring the nine hours between 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. for approximately 35 weeks a year that makes nearly $12,000 of university funds to patrol this private entity.

As I go to the parking office, now located next to Barnes and Noble, I can only hope they don't cite me again for not walking inside.

CULTURAL SERIES

Jayme Stone: banjoist and next artist to play in the series

By Grace Gutierrez | Staff Writer

Jayme Stone, an award winning banjoist, along with his diverse band and unique style, will visit New Mexico State University to play at the Cultural Series on Thursday, Nov. 3.

For more than 17 years, Jayme Stone has taken his unique sound all over the world. Stone's style and sound stems from his travels to many places and finding inspiration in other cultures.

"I get my inspiration from Japanese poetry. Brazilian literature. Instruments I found while traveling in remote Malian villages," Stone said.

Many people travel with Stone to create the diverse music. The traveling band consists of: Grant Gordy, guitar; Greg Garrison, bass; and Sandra Wong, nyckelharpa. The nyckelharpa, a traditional swedish string instrument with 16 strings, is one of the many unique instruments used by Stone's band.

In a trip to Africa, Stone collaborated with many musicians to combine a mix of music from the slave ships with the banjo's twang. The album "Africa to Appalachia" was created from the educational and inspirational trip.

"There's something utterly enchanting about this collaboration," a critic at songlines.com said. "The whole thing just seems completely at ease with itself; a real joy to listen to."

His latest album "Room of Wonders" creates even more of a culturally diverse mix because it was inspired by folk dances from around the world.

Over the years, Stone has won two awards for his music. His solo album "The Utmost" won the 2008 Juno Award for Instrumental Album of the Year, and, in 2009, Stone won the Juno Award for World Music Album of the Year for "Africa to Appalachia."

Las Cruces will have the chance to watch the culturally diverse group perform at the Atkinson Recital hall for the Cultural Series this week.

"I think it is important for us to be able to hear all types of music," junior education major Greg Gutierrez said. "It gives us a better view of the world around us."

"It's definitely important for music students to hear different types of music, mostly because it gives them perspective on the music that they play," junior filmmaking major Nathan Lefever said. "It lets them hear something different from what they're used to and broadens their horizons, while exposing them to different musical cultures and histories."

Ticket purchasing and more information can be found at panam.nmsu.edu/culturalseries.htm.

"Wait Until Dark" offers thrill for those who can still use a Halloween scare

By Susy Castillo | Staff Writer

For those who like feeling a chill down their spine and want an extra scare, "Wait Until Dark" is a perfect way to spend an evening.

The play centers on characters struggling for possession of a raggedy doll and offers some thrill and fright as a con man and a blind woman attempt to scheme and trick their way to victory.

The Black Box Theatre is a small enough location to create an intimate atmosphere for the show, making it feel as if one is in the middle of the action. With characters running in between the aisles, one cannot help but feel like a fly on the wall.

The play also offers action and mystery, keeping my attention throughout the show, and kept me wondering what would happen next and who would come out on top.

Valina Hamilton, who's character is a blind woman named Susie Hendrix, showed passion for theatre through her performance.

Bobby Senecal, who played a conman, made me feel ill and yet sentimental for his character.

By far my favorite actor was Lydia Caroe, a 13-year-old girl who played Gloria. Caroe's facial expressions alone portrayed the emotion behind the character. Every time she walked onto the stage she made me acquire even more liking to her. Caroe brought an originality that made the play even more special than the thriller alone. Caroe switches every other performance with Carly Hamilton, a third grader.

"It's hard to do everything every night because the show runs for a long time," Caroe said.

Caroe said she still has time for her regular life, since she switches off with Hamilton.

"Wait Until Dark" was written by Fredrick Knott.

The play has action and mystery. Throughout its entirety, the play kept my attention wondering what was going to happen next and who was going to end up on top.

"Wait Until Dark" is presented by No Strings Theatre Company and is directed by Karen Caros.

"Everything came together the way I had hoped," Caros said.

Caros said Wait Until Dark is appealing for a wide variety of audiences.

"It's a classic. It's like asking why should you read good literature. It gives you an all-around good cultural life," Caros said.

Senecal said this production in particular was an educational experience for him because Caros "really knows her stuff."

"Wait Until Dark" can be appealing for people who would normally not attend theatre productions. The set made me feel like I was in an authentic home.

The play will show on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays from Nov. 4 through Nov. 13, and on Thursday Nov. 10. Friday and Saturday shows start at 8 p.m., Sunday shows start at 2:30 p.m. and Thursday's performance will start at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10.00 for general admission, $9.00 for students and seniors over 65 and all seats on Thursdays are $7.00.

The Black Box Theatre is located at 430 N. Downtown Mall. For more information call 575-523-1223 or visit nostrings.org.

Domenici Institute launches public policy program

By Jessica Cervantes | Staff Writer

The Domenici Institute for Public Policy is starting a fellowship program, which will bring researchers from around the state and nation to New Mexico State University.

NMSU established The Domenici Institute in 2009, and through the Domenici Fellows Program, the institute plans to become a regional leader in the area of public policy analysis.

The Fellows program will provide financial support for researchers to conduct specific research in areas of interest to the Domenici Institute.

According to the Institute website, the Institute is a "living, nonpartisan institute" and is dedicated to providing unique learning opportunities involving New Mexico and global issues, holding an annual public policy forum, conducting sound science research and maintaining archives about the institute for public and scholarly use.

"Through the Domenici Fellows Program, research faculty will be able to conduct policy analysis and draft recommendations to local, state and federal governments based on sound science," former U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici, R-NM, said. "The goal of sound science research is to provide pragmatic, innovative, economically viable solutions to critical issues facing the nation."

Domenici Fellows will research and select from areas of strategic interest to the institute such as:

- Energy, especially the impact of Department of Defense facilities generating their own power.
- Entrepreneurial and free-market approaches to economic development.
- Development of graduate and undergraduate classes that advance free-market and entrepreneurial models of economic development.
- Assessment of workforce needs in New Mexico and development of best practices for filling identified gaps.
- The effects of recent health care reform on the operation of hospitals, medical practices, physicians and/or patients in New Mexico.
- Mental and behavioral health issues in a changing health care environment.
- The impact of large-scale reintroduction of uranium mining and development in New Mexico, especially on Native American populations.
- Reduction of the federal deficit, while also dealing with the economic recovery.

Program Manager of the Domenici Institute Sarah Patricolo said students will be affected directly with the future plans of the Domenici Fellows Program.

"With the program, it is our intent to have researchers serve as mentors and resources for students," Patricolo said.

Applications for the Domenici Fellows Program can be found at http://domenici.nmsu.edu/domenici-fellows-program.html

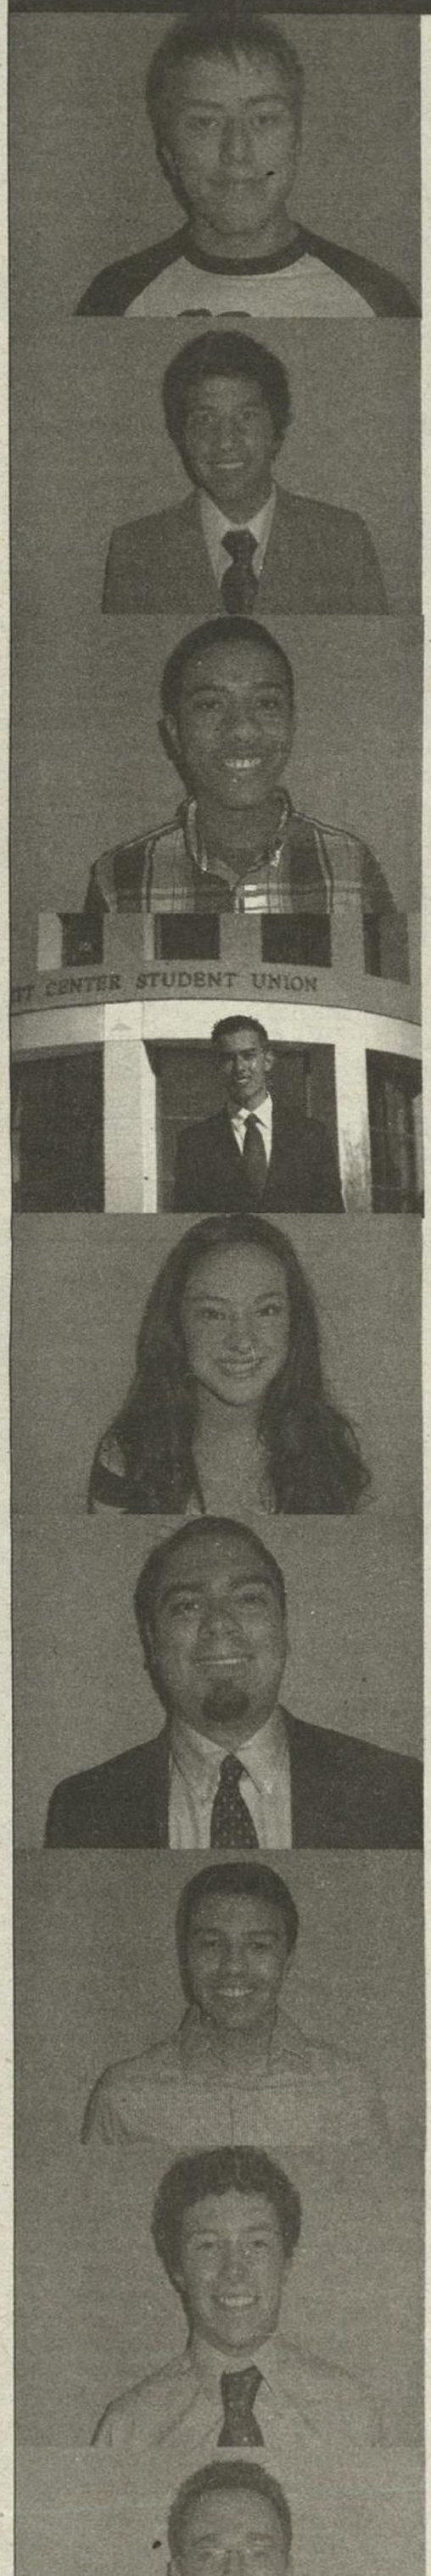
Fall 2011 Senator Elections

ASNMSU www.asnmsu.com



Carson Benn – College of Arts and Sciences

Hello All, my name is Carson Benn and I am running for ASNMSU Senator for the College of Arts and Sciences. I was born and raised in Albuquerque, NM and graduated from Eldorado High School in 2008. I study History and Philosophy and I've maintained an outstanding academic career at New Mexico State. Apart from my studies, I enjoy my position as the President of the Wesley Foundation, as well as being a member of the Phi Alpha Theta Honors Society. I am also a member of the NMSU Basketball Pep Band, and I participated in the Pride Marching Band for 3 years. I am deeply committed to providing a positive experience for myself and my fellow students at New Mexico State. In spite of the many economic and political hardships our nation has faced in recent years, I would strongly advocate that education is the key principle in providing sustainable development for our country. The local state universities are a perfect place to incorporate this policy, and Ipromise to keep NMSU competitive in providing an outstanding student experience.

Cosme Beamonte – College of Business Administration and Economics

My name is Cosme Beamonte I came by way of Argentina to study here and play golf for NMSU athletics. I am running for senate in the College of Business for the 2011-2012 term. I am majoring in Business and Management with in a minor in Leadership. I am looking forward to getting involved in student government to help my fellow students in the College of Business. I think this would be a great opportunity for me to incorporate new ideas and learn from other senators. I have been involved in student government in Argentina and I would like to bring that knowledge and apply it to the United States system of government. I am very excited to have the opportunity to run for senate. I look forward to giving my best effort to help as many students as possible.

Daniel Luna – College of Agriculture, Consumer and Environmental Sciences

Hello fellow Aggies, my name is Daniel Luna, and I am from Albuquerque, New Mexico. I am currently a freshman in the College of Agriculture and am majoring in Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Management. I plan on using my major to become a corporate planner. I graduated my high school in the top 10% with a GPA of 3.7 and also participated in MESA, Key Club, Student Senate, and took honors courses. My senior year of high school I was the class president. I now attend the beautiful campus here at New Mexico State and am a part of some great organizations. I am currently in the fraternity Kappa Sigma, a Roadrunner in ASNMSU and a member of the student advocacy board where I will be fighting for student rights and focusing on the New Mexico State lottery, because there is talk on it being taken away from students like me and you. I am a dedicated person and a hard worker. I hope you consider voting for me as a chair for the college of ACES, thank you.

David Maestas – College of Business Administration and Economics

As I near the end of my second term, my passion for helping others is stronger than ever. I have been actively involved in ASNMSU since I arrived at 2009 and would appreciate an opportunity for a third term to continue serving you. As your senator, I have written legislation to help give organizations within the college of business and throughout campus funding for various competitions and conferences. These clubs include Delta Sigma Pi, Financial Management Association, Beta Alpha Psi, Professional Golf Management Association, Model UN, among many others. I also serve as the Chairman of the Senate Community Affairs Committee, which verifies the community service done by organizations requesting funding. In addition to my work in senate, I also served on the 2010-2011 ASNMSU lobbying committee and traveled to the state capital to advocate on behalf of the students for lower tuition, better parking, and funding for our university. My advocacy on your behalf will continue as I now serve as a member of the 2011-2012 Student Advocacy Board. I have served you to the best of my ability and have enjoyed every minute of it. I would greatly appreciate another opportunity to work for and represent you!

Delaney Schneider – College of Education

Hello fellow students of NMSU, my name is Delaney Schneider and I am currently a freshman majoring in Elementary Education. I am running for an ASNMSU College of Education Senate seat. In high school I was involved in many organizations such as Student Senate, Model United Nations, Key Club, and Academic Decathlon. These organizations have given me many leadership opportunities and experience that I believe would be a great asset in the ASNMSU Senate. At NMSU I am currently involved with my sorority, Zeta Tau Alpha, as well as the ASNMSU Roadrunner program. As a Roadrunner, I shadow directors as well as senators and attend senate meetings regularly. I enjoy attending senate meetings and would like to be a part of the ASNMSU Senate. I am a hard worker and as a senator I feel I can be a strong voice for the students and make a positive impact on the Senate and represent the College of Education, as well as NMSU, well.

William Kowalczyk – College of Engineering

Hi, my name is Bill Kowalczyk. I'm a senior studying Engineering Physics with an emphasis on Mechanical Engineering. Over the past year, I have served as the president of my fraternity and am a member of Order of Omega. I was appointed as an ASNMSU senator this past September and have since endeavored to constantly be the voice of the Engineering College to senate. I hope to continue serving as the college's liaison throughout my next term while simultaneously helping all student organizations to obtain the funding they need. Thank you for considering me as your College of Engineering senator!

Gabriel Mario Ulibarri – Graduate College

My name is Gabriel Mario Ulibarri. I am a graduate student in the Department of Communication Studies. I received my Bachelor of Arts degree in Foreign Languages with a supplementary major in Latin American Studies. I have an extensive background within ASNMSU that dates back to my first semester as an undergraduate student. I have served on the Executive Branch as a Roadrunner, the Assistant Director of Activities, and two terms as the Director for Community Outreach. As the Director for Community Outreach, I coordinated large-scaled community service events and presented several workshops regarding the funding process of ASNMSU. I hope to now serve the Legislative Branch of ASNMSU and the Graduate School by being elected as a Graduate Senator.

Gaston De La Torre – College of Arts and Sciences

My name is Gaston De La Torre and I am running for my second term as a senator in the College of Arts & Sciences. I am a senior majoring in Government with a Supplementary in Law & Society and a minor in Philosophy. In my first term as senator I learned an enormous amount about the student government process and helped pass numerous significant pieces of legislation. I look forward to completing my final term as a senator and helping as many students as I possibly can whether that means appropriating money to a student in need or simply letting their voice be heard. If elected, I will help bring the issues the students have to the attention of the senate; I will do this by making ASNMSU as transparent as possible to the general student population. I will also help minimize student fees and do my best to prevent any wasteful spending that has been done in the past. Vote for me and I will bring a new and more affective ASNMSU to our student body.

Jacob Deaven – Graduate College

Hello, my name is Jacob Deaven and I am first year graduate student, seeking a MA in Government. Currently, I am serving as an interim Graduate Senator and Parliamentarian (Senate leader on issues relating to procedure). I was appointed to this position because of my extensive experience in student government. As an undergrad, I served as a Justice on the ASNMSU Supreme Court and as the Director of Governmental Affairs, where I advocated at the state legislature for student rights.

While I have only served one semester as a Senator, I have been dedicated to serving students. My main priorities as senator have been fighting for the rights and special needs of graduate students (in an undergraduate dominated student government), helping constitutes get their funding with as little bureaucracy as possible, and cutting excess and unnecessary spending. Besides my duties as senator, I am also working with the President of the Graduate Student Council to help address the rising cost of graduate student tuition.

Serving my fellow students is a passion of mine, and I hope you will re-elect me to Senate.

Fall 2011 Senator Elections

ASNMSU www.asnmsu.com

Jesus Ivan Rodriguez – College of Health & Social Services

Hello Aggies, My name is Jesus Ivan Rodriguez but I go by Ivan. I was raised in Las Cruces. I am currently serving my first term as a Health and Social Services Senator. This is my first year in ASNMSU but I am very involved, I represent Senate and the student body on two special committees (STAC: Student Technology Advisory Committee and the Advisory Committee). I am also the current vice-president and active member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. I am currently majoring in nursing. I am focused, determined, and personable. I look forward to a good year and hope to help my fellow Aggies. Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions.

Keely Brown – College of Health & Social Services

My name is Keely Brown, and I am a Nursing student in the College of Health and Social Services on the NMSU campus. I plan on completing the nursing program and continuing on with my PhD to work in cancer research. I was born in Albuquerque, NM, and raised in Santa Fe prior to moving to Southern California. While in California I worked as a production manager in both the music and special event industries putting together large-scale festivals and corporate events; I worked in the budgeting, planning and preparation, construction, and on-site management for all the events in which I worked with a diverse team of individuals. With an awareness of the specific issues and concerns of our campus, I would draw on my experiences with planning and budgeting processes to determine the best solutions. I feel that my prior work experience could benefit the ASNMSU and the College of Health and Social Services. I look forward to being elected as a Senator, and if given this honor, I hope to serve the College of Health and Social Services as well as the NMSU campus as a whole in the upcoming and future terms.

Kelsey Campbell – College of Business Administration and Economics

Hello, my name is Kelsey Campbell. I am a 2009 graduate from Palmer High School in Alaska. I am now a junior at NMSU, majoring in Economics with the College of Business. During the time I have been at NMSU I have been involved in many organizations which include Delta Sigma Pi (DSP) the Professional Business Fraternity, Delta Gamma a social Greek sorority, the College of Business Ambassadors, and lastly, the Native American Business Student Association because I am Inupiaq Eskimo.

Being a part of DSP I have been able to see how an organization can benefit by having outspoken and educated senators in place. DG has also allowed me to see that relationships beyond educational are very important at NMSU and these also need fostered. Being an ambassador allows me to directly correspond with the COB administrators, this could definitely give strength to the COB senator's views. Lastly, being a senator is about having the ability to listen to people; I will listen and represent the COB. Vote for me because a vote for Campbell is a vote for a voice for you!

Kirstien Dixon – College of Arts and Sciences

Hola NMSU! My name is Kirstien Dixon and I want to be your next Arts and Sciences student senator. I am currently a junior majoring in Government and when I'm not swiping your I.D's as a cashier at Taos, I can usually be found hanging out around campus or working hard as secretary for Stonewall QSA. In light of rising tuition costs and mediocre graduation rates, I feel that we Aggies deserve a student government aware of and understanding of the problems facing the average student. I am running for ASNMSU senate because I feel that the administration here at NMSU has undertaken an unfortunate shift in priorities away from serving the best interests of the academic student body to unnecessary ventures and placating corporate interests. While there isn't a whole lot I can do by myself if elected senator, together we can re-establish NMSU as a respected institution of, by and for the students.

Nell Baird – College of Education

Hey everyone! My name is Nell Baird, and I am running for re-election as a Senator for the College of Education! I am from Farmington, NM and graduated from Piedra Vista High School in 2009. I am currently a junior pursuing my major in Communication Disorders, and a minor in Linguistics. Besides ASNMSU and school, I am the vice-president of legislation for NSSLHA, National Student Speech Language Hearing Association, and an ambassador for the College of Education. I have enjoyed advocating for students and learning as much as I can in ASNMSU and I hope to have the opportunity to continue! Thanks!

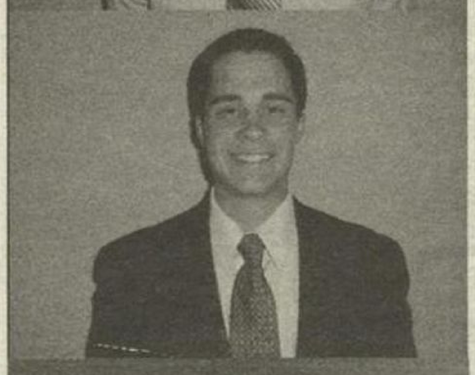
Tia Upchurch-Freelove – Graduate College

Tia is currently in her first semester as a Graduate student in the Government department. She is working toward obtaining a Masters of Arts in Government in 2013. Originally from a tiny town in Iowa, she recently moved to New Mexico to pursue her interests in border issues, Mexico, and human rights. She has extensive experience advocating for students; this experience includes leading the first and largest student organization in the nation on behalf of a 2008 campaign for president while attending University of Iowa. She holds bachelor's degrees in Political Science and International Studies (with an emphasis in Human Rights).
Tia was appointed to the position of Graduate senator this fall and hopes to continue serving as an advocate for NMSU students in 2012. As a representative of the Graduate school, she plans to speak on behalf of her fellow graduate students just as she has done this fall. She plans to work hard to give ASNMSU a greater sense of legitimacy through better communication with the student body and also promote changes at NMSU that will make our school a more welcoming and respected place that current and future students can be proud of.

Ugochukawu Ogbue – College of Engineering

Hello everyone, my name is Ugo and I'm majoring in Electrical & Computer Engineering. I'm running for re-election to the ASNMSU Senate as a college of Engineering Senator.

From my observation, people without experience and knowledge of the ASNSMU and NMSU laws and policies tend to make empty promises, only to become incapable of fulfilling their promises after being elected, due to jurisdiction and other restrictions.Based on my experience having been here for 3 years, serving at the senate for 1 year, coupled with my uttermost desire of serving humanity in all ramifications, I will be glad to continue serving the college of engineering and NMSU at large. I promise to impartially serve, represent, defend, advocate for you, and with all honesty be your voice at the ASNMSU senate. I will gladly assist and ensure that your legal opinion, request and desires that falls within the Jurisdiction of ASNMSU is adequately heard, considered and met. I will continue with my lobbying project to the relevant authorities to enable us have engineering classes during the summer sessions, be available for you at the needed times, keep you informed through emails like I have always done. VOTE FOR ME WITH CONFINDENCE!!



Wesley Jackson – College of Business Administration and Economics

Hey Aggies!! My name is Wesley Jackson and I am a 19 year old sophomore from El Paso, Texas and currently a student in the Business College where I am pursuing a degree in finance. I am an active member of my community, Vista Del Monte where I hold the position of community council president. I am very committed to obtaining a leadership role within ASNMSU and being the voice for the students. As a representative of the business college, I will focus on being widely available for each organization and making sure they receive the right amount of funds in a timely manner. I will also dedicate my time to learning the ASNMSU law book to assure the students and organizations that funding is being appropriated correctly and that no violations occur. As a senator for ASNMSU I will seek opportunities to minimize tuition increases, increase the life of the Lottery Scholarship, create a functional and productive parking system, and increase student employment. Feel free to contact me via email jacksonwesley82@yahoo.com with any questions or concerns, Go Aggies!!

Emma Ruben – College of Arts and Sciences

Hello students of New Mexico State University. My name is Emma Ruben and I am running for re-election as an ASNMSU senator for the college of Arts and Sciences. In the past two years I have enjoyed serving as your student representative, during which I had the opportunity to serve as vice-chair for both the Finance Committee and the Community Affairs Committee. As a senator in my previous term I drafted legislation appropriating funding to send students on both research and conference trips, and to supply organizations with operational equipment and will continue to do so should I be re-elected. I am currently of senior standing and hold a 4.0 GPA. I am pursuing degrees in Government and English, both subjects of which I am deeply passionate about. During my previous terms have I worked hard and taken great pleasure in working to represent and serve the NMSU student body and I would be honored to do so again in a third term. I appreciate your consideration and wish you a wonderful semester!

Undersecretary of Agriculture speaks to NMSU

By Vicky Diaz | Staff Writer

One New Mexico man, who works closely to President Barack Obama, shared how he aims on maintaining high agriculture standards with New Mexico State University students last Thursday.

Edward Avalos, undersecretary in the Marketing and Regulatory Programs Department of Agriculture, spoke about his experiences in the agriculture business. Avalos discussed how he overcame discouragement and eventually came to work directly for the president of the United States.

"We're so far removed from Washington D.C., that I want to expose our students how government works," Avalos said.

Avalos was invited to New Mexico State University, where he acquired his masters degree in agriculture and extended education, as one of the outstanding alumni. Agricultural affairs are important for each American's livelihood which is why he is determined to keep that at the forefront of the government's mind, Avalos said .

"I grew up on the farms. Everything that comes to my desk, that I do, I look at it at the perspective from the countryside," Avalos said.

The NMSU alum specifically "heads the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, the Agricultural Marketing Service and the Grain Inspection, Packers and Stockyards Administration," according to Avalos' profile in the Washington Post.

Avalos portrayed his passion for the subject during his presentation, not once losing his smile as he spoke about deciding between the "paved or dirt road." He said this is the decision that presents itself to each person, having to choose between the easy or hard route in life.

Avalos said his "fork in the road" decision came about when he first wrote the Product ID Study agreement between the Texas Department of Agriculture and the USDA.

Avalos said his supervisor at the time discouraged his efforts.

"We're not going to waste any resources on a document that will sit on the shelf that will collect dust," the supervisor said. "No one will ever read it."

The purpose of the document was to identify markets in Mexico for agricultural product for the United States. Avalos, standing firmly by the motto he was raised by, "your word is your bond," completed the document and submitted it to the USDA.

"I rattled their cages a little bit," Avalos said.

His efforts proved fruitful, several years later, the first marketing director for the New Mexico department of agriculture used Avalos' document as a resource and received a $350,000 federal grant.

Robert Tobermam, principal consultant of Shoei Food Corporation, recognized Avalos' name as the author of the Product ID agreement. Tobermam tracked him down in Hobbs, and asked Avalos if he wanted to work for the New Mexico Department of Agriculture.

What is Occupy Wall Street?

By Jose Salayandia | Staff Writer

New Mexico State University's student organization Aggie Solidarity held a meeting on Oct. 26, 2011 in hopes of finding an explanation for the tactics and goals behind the Occupy Wall Street movement that is now becoming a nationwide phenomenon.

Aggie Solidarity is a leftist organization which is looking to become involved with various issues concerning NMSU students. According to a flier from the group, Aggie solidarity is dedicated to the proliferation of leftist ideas and political action concerning campus, state and international issues. Aggie Solidarity organized the meeting in the hopes of encouraging dialogue between students about what the Occupy Wall Street movement means to them.

Approximately 40 students attended the discussion and gave their thoughts on how the movement affects them and the local community.

Graduate student Jazmin Garcia said she believes this a good time for people to think about everything that is going on around them.

"I think this is a very good opportunity for people to become socially aware and make their own decisions. It's a good time to think about what we're doing as a society and what we want to do for ourselves," Garcia said. "I hope we start to develop more sustainable local economies and support ourselves and our neighbors instead of just buying what is marketed to us."

The Occupy Wall Street movement has received criticism from various people who claim that the movement has no clear and concise goal.

The movement does not have any affiliation to a particular political party and has drawn different crowds who also express their outrage with issues they find important. According to occupywallst.org, the movement looks to fight back against "the corrosive power of major banks and multi-national corporations over the democratic process and the role of Wall Street in creating an economic collapse that has caused the greatest reces-

NMSU placed at the bottom of Trojan sexual health study

By Grace Gutierrez | Staff Writer

New Mexico State University ranked in the bottom ten on the 2011 Trojan Brand Condoms Sexual Health Report card due to lack of care.

Every year, the Trojan company ranks universities on their sexual health. This includes the availability of health facilities, tests, protection and help given to students. This is done to promote responsible sexual health decisions for college students.

"The Trojan Sexual Health Report Card continues to call attention to the importance of sexual health resources on campus and inspire students to take action into their own hands," Bruce Tetreault, manager of Trojan Brand Condoms, said in a press release.

Part of the rankings are based on the services of the health center.

"Medical specialty services include nutrition and mental health services, pharmacy, laboratory and x-ray services are also available" according to wellness.nmsu.edu.

The listed services do not include any sexual health services, which is part of the reason the score was so low.

Another part of the report card is based on the students opinions of the health center, websites and groups available sion in generations."

The movement looked to end the power that money held over political influence, which has led to the popular slogan, "We are the 99 percent."

Freshman history major Alan Dicker led the discussion and said it is important for people to understand the importance of the movement.

"What we wanted was to have an academic dialogue on what the movement is about, simply have a space to critically discuss where Occupy Wall Street came from, what its goals are and what they may accomplish," Dicker said. "A lot of people are not clear on what this movement is and why it is important."

cultural event.

More than 7,000 people have attend both the concert and the mariachi mass in the past and the show is expected to draw a similar crowd this year.

Following both the spectacular concert and the mariachi mass, the Parque Festival will start at noon Sunday, Nov.13, in the Mesilla Plaza. At the Parque Festival people are able to enjoy more mariachi music, New Mexican food, there will also be a sale of traditional Hispanic arts and crafts.

While the conference provides various forms of entertainment, it also caters to those eager to learn mariachi for themselves, with student workshops. Workshops start on Thursday, Nov.10, for the participants who have signed up to gain experience and perfect their mariachi techniques.

Orientation for the workshops is on Wednesday, Nov.9, where students will become acquainted with the instructor of the class.

"Usually Mariachi Cobre teaches the workshops" Myrna Moreno, four-year attendee and student who plays the guitar, said. "They pass out sheet music with three songs to learn to play at the conference."

"Along with learning the sheet music for the conference, we learn important techniques as well," Moreno's fellow workshopmate of four-years, Ari Crawford, said.

Crawford plays the guitarron, which is a plucked six string instrument from Mexico.

Both Moreno and Crawford said they have gotten over their "stage jitters," as they play with the whole workshop group at the spectacular concert on Saturday.

With over 700 students in attendance, it is easy to make and keep friends during the annual conference, Crawford said.

"I look forward to seeing who's going to be teaching me, and seeing the friends I've made throughout each conference," Crawford said. "It is like a break from school as it's getting tougher, with the conference, it feels like a vacation."

The student showcase concert is on Friday, Nov.11, at 7:30 pm, featuring the most talented young acts in mariachi and ballet folklorico.

Acts for the student showcase concert were required to audition in advance, and were notified if chosen, several weeks before the show.

Governor Susana Martinez recently awarded the Las Cruces International Mariachi Conference with the 2011 Governor's award for Excellence in the Arts.

For more information on the conference, or to sign up for workshops, students can log on to: http://lascrucesmariachi.org/index.php to the students, as well as the availability.

"It surprises me that we have such a low number," senior english major Dani Sandoval said. "The university does not seemed too concerned about the sexual health."

The health center is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day, which makes it difficult for some students to access. However, there are many other on-campus resources available to the NMSU community that can be found on the health center website, which helped the ranking.

Out of the 141 schools that were in the report card, NMSU was ranked 134, which was higher than in 2010 where NMSU was ranked number 97 on the report card.

Only a select few were lower than NMSU on the list.

The U.S. Air Force Academy and Brigham Young University were two of the lowest ranked colleges on the report card.

Avalos

"By doing the right thing, I was hired [as Director of Marketing and Development]," Avalos said. "If I had listened to the supervisor I wouldn't have ever been hired." Avalos also shared his excitement for being one of three New Mexico men on the sub cabinet, saying "it is an honor to do this."

Since 2009, he has traveled to 28 different states, from Buenos Aires to Vietnam and Peru. Surrounding himself with the people and the culture of each area has helped Avlalos experience how communities contribute to the U.S.

As a man who is passionate about agriculture and the health of this nation, Avalos said he is adamant about getting more New Mexico students placement in internships and job opportunities.

Avalos said involvement is vital because each person in government makes decisions that directly affect the public.

Avalos also encouraged the class of about 20 that the government is in need of people who know the country and have a passion for agriculture.

"I will look very hard to place NMSU students and students in the NM area," Avalos said. "We need to get good students up there because we're recruiting employees for the future."

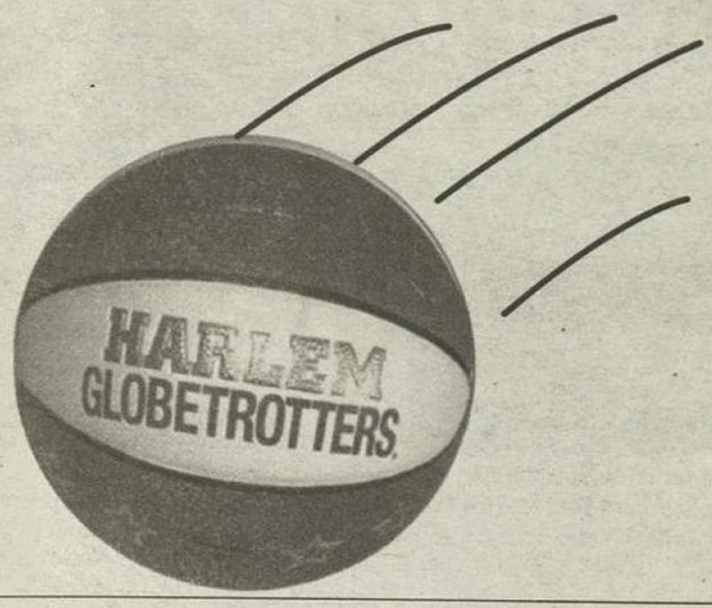
The world famous Globetrotters return to Las Cruces



Courtesy Globetrotters Apperal/ the Round Up

By Anthony Ruff | Staff Writer

The world famous Harlem Globetrotters recently announced their return to Las Cruces and the Pan American Center this February with their dazzling basketball skills.

For the first time since 2008, the Trotters are visiting Las Cruces on Feb. 11 with their fun for the whole family basketball routine. This year the team brings in one of the most exciting rookie classes to ever suit up for the team.

"There is no chance I miss the Trotters this go around," junior accounting major Trey Johnson said. "Last time they came through, I was visiting family. I will definitely be there this time."

This team may have the most explosive and newsworthy rookies in the prestigious history of the Globetrotters. The class is headlined by the world's tallest pro basketball player, Paul "Tiny" Sturgess. Standing at 7-foot-8, Sturgess hails from England and can touch the rim without jumping.

While Sturgess becomes the tallest Globetrotter in the 85-year history of the team, Jonte "Too Tall" Hall is the shortest player to ever suit up. Coming in at 5-foot-2, Hall is known for his quickness and speed.

Freshman kinesiology major Hailey James said she will attend to see Fatima "TNT" Maddox, just the ninth female Globetrotter in history and first since 1993.

"I think it is fantastic to see a woman out there showing all the guys how the sport should be played," James said. "I hope she dunks on everybody."

The Globetrotters are known globally for their amazing basketball skills, outrageous performances, fan interaction and for always beating the Washington Generals. The Generals are the Trotters competition most of the time and have only beaten Harlem once,

The Big Three

Aggie seniors look to lead by example

By Anthony Esparza | Staff Writer

The Boston Celtics have theirs.
So does the Miami Heat.

This season, the New Mexico State men's basketball team will have its own version of the "big three" on the court.

Forward Wendell McKines, guard Hernst Laroche and center Hamidu Rahman are three seniors on the Aggie roster whose contributions NM State coach Marvin Menzies is optimistic about.

"We have the big three in Hamidu, Wendell and Hernst. All of those guys have come a long way from their freshmen years," Menzies told NMStatesports.com. "It's kind of eerie to look at them as seniors. It seems like they just got here."

After redshirting the 2010-11 season because of a broken foot, McKines returns this season. He spent the summer playing in the San Francisco Pro-Am Tournament in California.

"What I learned was not to take things for granted and appreciate every blessing," McKines said of his year away from competitive play. "It taught me better work ethic on and off the court."

McKines acknowledged the familiarity he and his two senior teammates have with one another, but said the Aggies will play more as a team than as individuals this season. As the most experienced players on the team, McKines, Rahman and LaRoche look to lead by example on and off the court.

"We've been here the longest, and the younger guys look up to us," McKines said. "They look to us for leadership, and we have to provide that."

Rahman was hampered by a calf injury last season, but he said he is ready to end his tenure at NM State on a high note. He also plans on taking on more of a leadership role alongside McKines and Laroche.

"I feel like I'm 100 percent now," Rahman said of his health status. "I sat out a couple of games last year, but this year I feel like everything is good, and I'll be all right to start the season."

Missing games has not been an issue for Laroche. The Aggie point guard has started in 99 consecutive games dating back to his freshman year in 2007.

"It was a blessing for me to start all the games and play a lot of minutes," Laroche said. "This year I just want to continue on and be a better player and teammate for the better of the team."

Expectations are high for the Aggies this season. NM State was picked to finish second in the Western Athletic Conference preseason coaches' poll. Menzies expects the conference to be competitive from top to bottom this season.

"We have some really good teams that are on the borderline that can make noise at the very top of the poll like Hawai'i and Idaho," Menzies told NMStatesports.com. "It's going to be another balanced, competitive season in the WAC, so I'm looking forward to it."

McKines said he believes the Aggies have the potential to compete at a high level this season.

"I honestly believe we're one of the best teams in the country," McKines said. "I believe we're the best team in the WAC, and we will win the WAC. Hopefully we can go deep into the NCAA Tournament."

New era for NM State women's basketball

By Anthony Esparza | Staff Writer

It is the start of a new era for the New Mexico State women's basketball team.

After finishing last season with a record of 14-18, the Aggies look to rebound in 2011-12 under new coach Mark Trakh. Trakh previously coached at the University of Southern California where he compiled a 90-64 record from 2004-09.

"They're really coachable and eager to learn everything and to win," Trakh said. "I think that's a big thing. They're just so receptive to everything."

One Aggie who is adapting to Trakh's coaching style is senior forward Tabytha Wampler, who received Western Athletic Conference between honors from both the media and coaches.

Wampler started in all 32 games last season and led the team in scoring and rebounding. She averaged 12.7 points and 7.6 rebounds per game last year for the Aggies.

"We run more so up and down. He runs us in between so it gets us physically and mentally tired," Wampler said of Trakh's approach at practice. "We ran with coach Spence too. It's just a different kind of running."

Trakh wants to see the team improve its intensity to be able to play at a high level on both sides of the court for the entire game.

"We're going to play together and have a deliberate style," said Trakh. "We're going to milk the clock, try to get good shots and defend really well."

NM State was picked to finish sixth in the WAC in coaches and media preseason polls. The Aggies' season tips off on Nov. 11 when the team travels to Texas to face the Houston Cougars.

The Cougars defeated the Aggies 82-62 in Las Cruces last year. Houston went on the finish the season with a record of 26-6 and a home record of 11-1. NM State then returns home for a three-game home stand against Idaho State, University of Texas El Paso and Arizona.

Aggie rodeo takes home first

By Jessica Cervantes | Staff Writer

After hosting the fall rodeo for the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association at the Southern New Mexico fairgrounds Friday and Saturday night, the New Mexico State University men and women's teams are now ranked number one in their region.

However, the NMSU men's team is ranked number one nationally, as of Oct. 31, with 3,452.50 points, above Mesalands Community College who is ranked second with 3,434.50.

The men and women rodeo teams are a part of the Grand Canyon Region and racked up a total of 5,081.99 points between both teams at the rodeo against competitors such asthe University of Arizona and New Mexico Highlands University.

The event consisted of saddle bronc riding, bareback riding, bull riding, tie-down roping, steer wrestling, team roping, breakaway roping and goat tying. Cooper Ray DeWitt, member of the NMSU men's team, currently holds first place nationally in saddle bronc riding with 555.0 points and Mesalands Community College holds second place with 366.0 points.

NMSU has also received recognition with Johnny Salvo's win as the 2011 National Tie-Down Roper.

NMSU rodeo coach Jim Brown said the team is strong and expecting another champion this year.

"It's not mainstream athletics," Brown said. "Students should support the team because the events are free and the sport is tough."

Woman's team member Raley Radomske, junior agriculture business major, has competed with the team since her freshman year at NMSU with her main events being goat tying, barrel racing and breakaway roping.

"The best part about the sport is getting a thrill from when you succeed," Radomske said.

The next rodeo will be held in Tucson, Ariz. on Feb. 4 hosted by the University of Arizona.

back in 1973.

The Globetrotters went out and signed the top three players in the 2010 College Slam Dunk Contest. Expect this year's team to live even further above the rim than usual.

The winner of the dunk contest was 5-foot-10 Jacob "Hops" Tucker. Tucker sports an amazing 50-inch vertical leap, and has become a YouTube sensation. He is joined in this year's rookie class by runners-up, John "Jet" Williams and Darnell "Spider" Wilks.

"This even is a great chance to bring the entire family out and enjoy the team together," Pan Am ticket manager Patrick Kennedy said. "The Globetrotters provide great entertainment and we are thrilled to have them back."

Of course, the stars will also be suiting up for the Globetrotters. The more known Trotters expected to be at the Pan Am Center are Kevin "Special K" Daley, Nate "Big Easy" Lofton, Herbert "Flight Time" Lang, and Shane "Scooter" Christens.

"I remember 'Special K' from the last time they were in town," senior agriculture major Drew Foreman said. "There is a reason he has that nickname: his game is special. Well worth it to see him and the others play."

Tickets for the event start at $20, and can be bought through Ticketmaster, the Globetrotters website, the New Mexico State ticket office and by calling (800) 745-3000.

MeowWolf presents Glitteropolis

By Cherish Marquez | Staff Writer

New Mexico State University's art gallery is showcasing a group of creative minds where the artists will present their glitter inspired world, Glitteropolis, to Las Cruces and El Paso communities from Nov. 30 through Feb. 18.

Meow Wolf is a group of ambitious artists originating in Santa Fe, New Mexico that started the event to offer the community an alternative style in the arts and music.

"Glitteropolis came about as an idea from The Due Return," Matt King, one of the original members of the group, said.

Meow Wolf brings a glitter inspired world full of luster and disco balls. The Art Gallery, located in the Art Department on NMSU campus, will be transformed into a wonderland filled with scenes designed by each artist group participating.

Preston Thayer, art gallery director, helped bring Meow Wolf to NMSU in hopes of offering something new and exciting for students.

Stephanie Taylor, an NMSU art professor recommended Meow Wolf, Thayer said.

"[Taylor] was interested in their work after seeing the installation, The Due Return," Thayer said.

King described the inspiration as a "treasure room" where viewers would look through a portal and see "tons of glittered objects."

"The way this show is evolving to be, it's never fully planned out." King said. "There's always room for what individuals want to do and how the show will be able to stand as an individual object."

For Meow Wolf this is the first show they have ever done at a University art Gallery, which brings students op-

MEET THE BAND

WORM-HOLE

Veteran rockers take classic sound to the edge

Poster for Worm Hole featuring the band members Courtesy of Worm Hole band /theRound Up

By Jose Salayandia | Staff Writer

Las Cruces has slowly built a complex music scene filled with plenty of diversity and in such a complex scene, it is hard for any band to stand out. For the members of rock band Worm-Hole, it is simply a place where they continue to stand out as a unique and versatile act.

Worm-Hole is made up of Travis Manning on vocals and guitar, John Geddes on bass and vocals and Michael Portillo on drums. Influenced by a wide variety of bands including Led Zeppelin and Mr. Bungle, Worm-Hole began as a simple classic rock and funk band with a tone coming straight out of 1970. Since then, Worm-Hole has continually evolved their sound into an edgy, crunch, which still stays true to its classic roots.

Manning said he likes his lyrics to explore a wide variety of subjects.

"They vary so much from song to song," Manning said. "I write about everything from the end of the world to dirty politicians."

Worm-Hole started in 2006 and has been through five drummers and two guitarists and released two albums since their formation. The current lineup features Portillo who was playing with a band called Larquerhead before joining Worm-Hole in May 2011. Since then, Worm-Hole has already played about 20 shows including a tour to Phoenix, Long Beach, Anaheim and Las Vegas in August 2011.

One thing that each member agrees on is that Las Cruces has a lot of talent for such a small city, but almost no support for its local artists. Manning said that he believes the local scene has never been worse and there are very few opportunities for musicians in the area.

"Musicians are so underappreciated in Las Cruces," Manning said. "That's why we like to tour as much as possible."

Regardless of the current state of the local music scene, Worm-Hole continues to perform in the hopes of entertaining their hometown. As more bands continue joining the local music scene, a breath of life for musicians in Las Cruces is simply inevitable. With veteran rockers like Worm-Hole leading the way, a deeper appreciation may soon be seen for local talents.

Geddes offered some advice, which he said he believes will help the scene receive some needed relief.

"[Las Cruces is a] great local scene. Lots of talent around," Geddes said. "Unfortunately, there are no more venues. Get out there and support the local music scene and it will grow."

Worm-Hole will be performing Friday, Nov. 4, 2011, and Tuesday, Nov. 29, 2011 at The Green Room in Las Cruces and is currently planning another tour. Worm-Hole is also finishing a full-length album currently titled "Travel By Light," which is expected to be released in December 2011.

portunities to work.

"We're hoping some students will want to come in and spend some time to make a part of the show their own." Caity Kennedy, a Meow Wolf member, said. "We're all working within the same theme, were going to have some landscape space that doesn't have a plan so if students are interested, they can help with the space."

The group is also looking for anybody within the community to donate materials such as plywood, fake flowers, chicken wire, tree branches and of course, glitter.

Glitteropolis will be set up in several different sections from a front yard to a tar pit there are endless possibilities for students to get involved.

The members of Meow Wolf will be working in the university art gallery from noon to midnight every day.

"We want people to come in and own Meow Wolf." King said. "You have to come in and just do it."

For students interested in coming in to help or have any ideas for Glitteropolis, simply walk into the art gallery located in the Art Department off of University Ave.
